OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY

As an AOTA member, you are part of a vitally important profession that helps people across the lifespan participate in the things they want and need to do through the therapeutic use of everyday activities.

Your holistic and customized approach to evaluations, interventions, and outcomes helps a child with disabilities participate in school and in social situations, assists a person recovering from injuries to regain skills, aid an older adult to stay as independent as possible, and offers the specialized support and services to people of all ages and in all circumstances that only occupational therapy can provide.

Occupational Therapy Living Life To Its Fullest®

Occupational Therapy: Living Life To Its Fullest® is your professional brand. Help get the word out about this powerful message through your 2015 OT Month products.

BE A CHAMPION FOR OT!

www.promoteOT.com

- Share AOTA's "Living Life To Its Fullest" podcast series, aimed at educating consumers about the profession, with your current and potential clients. Episodes and archives can be found at www.aota.org/podcasts.
- Download AOTA fact sheets from www.aota.org/factsheets and share them with other disciplines and external audiences to help them understand more about the value of occupational therapy.
- Develop contests about occupational therapy for your colleagues (perhaps use Jeopardy, Wheel of Fortune, or other popular game shows as your models). Quizzes and trivia can be fun ways to engage people and increase their knowledge of the profession. Award prizes from reasonably priced items available on the AOTA website at www.promoteOT.com.
- Ask your mayor (or work with your state association to ask your governor) to sign a proclamation honoring April as OT Month; then send out a press release right away announcing it to local media. For a sample proclamation and press release, go to www.aota.org/OTMonth.
- Offer to organize a run/walk or other type of fundraiser sponsored by your agency that highlights the positive effects of occupational therapy.
- Offer to speak to local groups, such as area agencies on aging, or parent-teacher associations, to let them know how occupational therapy services can help families in any number of ways.
- Ask about submitting an article to retirement or senior center newsletters on occupational therapy and its role in the lives of older adults.
- Hold sessions for campus communities as a student occupational therapy association activity. Topics of particular interest might be the ergonomics of computer use, a task analysis of studying, weighing backpacks, and the importance of balancing school pressures and personal life.
- Make personal visits to referral sources, delivering brochures and other information.
- Open your facility for tours, OT practice demonstrations, or receptions to give others first hand insight into what occupational therapy practitioners do.
- Show OT in action online and in person - make a personal video of your work with clients and post it on YouTube and AOTA's online community. Be sure to get permission from any clients you involve. Choose a venue to demonstrate your special practice area or a specific topic, such as: older drivers, backpack, low vision, or home modifications. Go to www.otconnections.org.

Celebrate occupational therapy throughout April and all year by sharing the value of your profession through special events, messages, and products. Here are a few ideas to share with your colleagues and come up with even more. Find more at www.aota.org/otmonth.

- Hold an “Occupational Therapy Lunch and Learn” presentation at a local Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club, Rotary Club, Jaycees, assisted living facility, hospital, or other setting. Check out our Presentation Resources available through the AOTA website.
- Get permission to host an information booth about occupational therapy at the entrance to a college campus, local mall, or other location and be prepared to clearly explain the role of OT in a person’s health and wellness.
- Hold an OT-focused health fair with free screenings.
- Give out 2015 OT Month buttons, pencil grips, travel mugs, or other products to staff, clients, family members, or professional associates. Consider a shirt or tote bag as a premium gift.
- Send a letter to the editor of your local newspaper or another publication providing OT-based suggestions on ways to address a community issue (e.g., childhood obesity, aging in place, sensory issues).
- Visit a local media outlet’s websites and post an event for all to see. Most newspapers, and television and radio stations host free online community calendars.
- Do you have a positive experience about OT to share? Contact your local newspaper and see if the staff accepts guest bloggers or columnists. Readers love personal stories of triumph. Start jotting down a few sentences about something you’ve participated in or witnessed. Sometimes your own personal voice is stronger than you think. See examples of client stories at www.aota.org/clientstories.
- Write an article for publication in your hospital or agency newsletter demonstrating the value of occupational therapy. Remember to show, not tell.
- Sign your e-mails with a tag line that promotes public awareness, such as:
